Financial scandals Enron Seven years after the collapse of Enron, it was revealed that the American energy company was using accounting tricks to create billions of dollars in illusory profits. Greg Smallwood was forced to resign as CEO of Nucor after he failed to raise the money from shareholders to save the company. Enron was eventually declared bankrupt on December 2, 2002 and dissolved by the Texas courts in 2004. The failure of Enron was widely blamed on the company's accounting system, which had failed to detect that a number of deals had actually been designed to enrich the company's senior executives and the private partnerships, while, simultaneously, hiding losses and inflating its earnings. The widespread use of the internet to trade and buy stocks and other securities was seen as a prime factor that made the downfall of the company possible. The Madoff financial scandal In the Madoff financial scandal, financier Bernie Madoff was able to fool investors for decades. Madoff and his 1cb139a0ed
