A: There is 32bit iso available for 2.1. Download from this link. Gurnell Rural District Gurnell was a rural district in Derbyshire, England from 1894 to 1974. It covered the northern part of the Metropolitan Borough of Mansfield. It was formed under the Local Government Act 1894 from the part of the Mansfield Rural Sanitary District, which was created in that year from that part of the Mansfield Rural District which was not in Nottinghamshire, and included the parishes of Bramcote, Giltbrook, Ilkeston Rural, Maplake, Peakwell, Simonswood, Woodhall Spa, and West Willoughby. In 1935 it absorbed the Urban District of Seer Green and the Rural District of Creswell, reducing its area by slightly over half. In 1936 it had an area of and in 1939 an estimated population of 36,160. The district was abolished in 1974 under the Local Government Act 1972 and replaced by three district wards in the Mansfield urban area and two new rural district wards. This code is extracted from Swift Getting Started by Apple. It comes from a tutorial on Udemy and has one comment that I'd like to understand. In the tutorial they call a function that is a method of a class. I suppose they meant to do this because they are initializing the Lander class. I have two questions. How is a function called if it is a method of a class? Is this the correct way to name a class? I think that Land is just a label for the class.

import UIKit
class Land {
    init(name: String, x: Int, y: Int) { self.name = name
        self.x = x
        self.y = y
    }
}
```
