A heat shock protein is associated with the virulence of Pseudomonas aeruginosa in infected corneas. Pseudomonas aeruginosa causes a serious infection in the cornea of contact lens wearers. A common theme in the pathogenesis of bacterial keratitis is the activity of secreted virulence factors that damage the cornea, and interaction between bacterial components and the host immune response. Bacterial adherence is thought to play a major role in this interaction. We show that a heat shock protein (hsp) of P. aeruginosa is associated with a biofilm-forming phenotype, suggesting that this protein may also have a role in the virulence of this organism. Furthermore, Hsp-coated agarose beads significantly reduced the number of adherent bacteria (P The Trump administration has decided to move the U.S. Embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem in one of its first acts after taking office, multiple U.S. officials confirmed Monday, marking a departure from previous administrations that never formally recognized Jerusalem as Israel's capital. The officials said President Trump was expected to announce the decision in a Tuesday address to
